Forcing House of Japan Lilium Longiflorum.

Lilium Longiflorum.

(JAPAN GROWN.)

These will be grown extensively the coming season as a substitute for Lilium Harrisii for late or Easter flowering, because they have usually proven much more free from disease than Harrisii, as well as unmixed with the latter variety. They are also much more reasonable in price, as shown below. While they do not produce as many flowers as Harrisii bulbs of the same size, they can be had for less money, and a saving made in this respect. A large grower of these bulbs near Chicago who forced both Harrisii and Longiflorum last year, says: "I will grow Japan Longiflorum for my full needs the coming Easter, they gave me best results."

Dutch Roman Hyacinths.

These cannot be excelled for growing either as cut-flowers or pot plants, owing to cheapness of Bulbs, and earliness of flowering. The named varieties are particularly good for growing three in a pot as they produce strong spikes, almost equal to those of the second size named; flowers are stronger and larger than blooms of French Romans.
